Re-issued for 2015, Ford Consul, Zephyr and Zodiac tells the complete story of a vitally important range of Ford family cars. From 1950, when the first of these entirely new cars was introduced, and for more than twenty years after that, the range set engineering, styling and marketing standards that Ford's rivals always struggled to match. This detailed narrative covers the complete history of these versatile machines, and of the first Granadas which took over in 1971. Not only is this the technical story of these cars, but also that of the people and the world events that effected their careers. Topics covered include: Full history of all Consul, Zephyr and Zodiac models; Details of the cars' motorsport careers; Rarely seen details of engineering innovations; Special feature panels on key personalities; Ford facilities and technical innovations; Full specifications for each model

World Car Catalogue

During the 1960s, the automobile finally secured its position as an indispensable component of daily life in Britain. Car ownership more than doubled from approximately one car for every 10 people in 1960 to one car for every 4.8 people by 1970. Consumers no longer asked "Do we need a car?" but "What car shall we have?" This well-illustrated history analyzes how both domestic car manufacturers and importers advertised their products in this growing market, identifying trends and themes. Over 180 advertisement illustrations are included.

Zephyr Zodiac is the story of a Mark 3 Ford Zephyr Zodiac, the iconic car introduced in Britain to great acclaim in 1962. The narrative begins at the time our two-tone, white-walled tyred, leopard-skin upholstered car rolls off the production line in May of that year and ends when it meets its timely demise in a car crusher in 2012, during which time it chronicles how it affects the lives of seven of the people who have the pleasure of owning it during that period. The seven tales of its 50 eventful years earth include: the time it spends its days as a chauffeur-driven company limousine (and as a love nest by the chauffeur); the spell it is the family car of a loving, childless couple (and the new home of a couple of homeless children); the occasion it serves as a funeral car (and a temporary safe); the four years it is a taxi (and a means of transport for getting rid of a troublesome wife and her even more troublesome mother-in-law); the time it spends as a Classic Car (in which mode it fulfils the dreams of both a retired body shop mechanic and a Z-Car obsessed police superintendent). During which, among other things, it is given birth in, used as an emergency wedding car, stolen (more than once), used to have sex in (much more than once), and is instrumental in giving its grateful owner and his wife their lives back. Some of these stories in Zephyr Zodiac will warm the cockles of your heart and some will make you laugh. Maybe a couple of them will do both.

So here I am walking again an old path made new by the very fact that I am upon it once more, accompanied by familiar hordes: the fecund majority of the dead, the myriad of the living in all of their many forms, defunct, mutant, revenant or otherwise, traversing memory's infinite field. In the evocative prose that makes him one of our finest writers, Martin Edmond recalls his experiences of growing up in rural New Zealand in the 1950s and 60s. The son of schoolteachers, Edmond's early life was shaped by his father's developing career and the moves it dictated: from Ohakune, to Greytown, to Huntly, to Heretaunga. The Dreaming Land shows us the making of a thinker and a writer. Edmond documents the people, locations, and events that made a lasting impression on him, and maps the development of his mental landscape – a landscape marked by curiosity, empathy and the capacity for acute observation. It is a book that is at once personal and universal, charting formative moments yet filled with details that resonate more broadly. The Dreaming Land pushes at the boundaries of what can be remembered to create a narrative which absorbs, illuminates and enchants.
